As a result of what was mentioned in the previous paragraph, we will explain in detail each step mentioned above

First, find out what sets you apart from others

The competition in dentistry is fierce and no one is denying that especially if you are targeting a residential area teeming with older and more experienced competitors; However, to come out victorious with the largest share of the target patients is not difficult, all you have to do is create a competitive advantage that makes you the best among them. The feature may be limited to reducing the price of the examination, it may be free cleaning sessions, it may be a number of additional consultations, it may be joining a private group and following up live with patients firsthand, such as Facebook or WhatsApp groups, it may be in the same way of dealing with Patients and the comfort they feel with you compared to other doctors. Creating your own competitive advantage, making the comparison that the patient makes when searching for a dentist tends mostly to you, you may be interested in seeing how to market through influencers

Second, create a strong bond between you and patients

Your relationship with patients, especially patients in dental clinics, is an essential pillar for the continuation of your work; The common fear of patients from this type of doctor, is easy to overcome if the patient feels confident and comfortable when entering your clinic, so I make sure to

Starting a friendly conversation with your patient that breaks their fear barrier
Inform him of the steps that you will take and their importance so that you make him participate in what you are doing and prepare for it, however, do not exaggerate the matter in a way that makes him afraid of the experience and nervous about completing the session

If the patient is constantly visiting your clinic, share some of the details he mentioned in the previous sessions so that you assure him that you are well aware of his condition and take care of every complaint issued by him and the nature of his suffering into your consideration.

Say your patients' names well when you meet them, either by remembering them directly or by looking at the name rolls

Dedicate an hour a day or a specific day a week to communicate with your patients and answer their phone questions or follow up with them through a live broadcast on social media platforms

Create specialized content that answers the questions of your customers and strengthens your relationship with them in terms of service knowledge, not just commercial

Third: Expand your medical services

Patients always suffer from multiple trips that they take in one treatment trip. In the case of dealing with the dental clinic, there is the examination stage with the specialized doctor, then dealing with dental laboratories in different installation cases, or dealing with physiotherapists in cases of jaw treatment and then dealing with With pharmacies and the search for the appropriate treatment and other processes interrelated in the treatment journey; If you can help your patient's comfort by having all these services in one place, you will have contributed to reducing the effort he spends on the treatment journey, and you will win for yourself a new competitive advantage.

Fourth: Create a distinct culture for your clinic

Culture means the image that patients have of the environment surrounding your clinic, as well as the way you deal with it. If your work team receives customers with a rigid face, and you deal with them with stress and fatigue; The view formed around the culture of your clinic is that the work environment in it is exhausting and tiring for everyone, so there is a percentage of error from you or those working under your command. But if the patients are interviewed with a cheerful face by the staff, and all age groups are taken into consideration with respect and organization, in addition to your professional handling with them, it will make them see the clinic as a safe environment to deal with, in addition to drawing a professional image of its workers, you may be interested in viewing online marketing Social media

Fifth: Make it easy to communicate with you

When patients are looking for a good dentist, all they want to do is book ASAP.

If at this step the patient encounters one of the following obstacles:

No phone number to contact

Unclear title

There is no link to the site on the electronic map

The line of communication is always up from the service

Difficult to get to the place

Difficulty booking through different medical applications

Difficulty finding the clinic page or the treating doctor

Sixth: Motivate patients and make them feel special because they chose you

Your loyal customers are always the biggest treasure of your activity, the better their experience with you, the more they will recommend you to other patients; And these experience-based self-referrals are always more effective in getting more customers with you than any other marketing effort. Caring for these patients in particular and flooding them with a set of special offers and discounts will make them always deal with you and nominate you to other patients besides defending you against any competing marketing propaganda

Seven: Manage your clinic professionally

This point represents the most important marketing points used in dental clinics; If you apply the rest of the previous strategies and surprise your customers that the management method in your clinic is random and there is no organization in it, all your efforts will be wasted without achieving any financial or moral profit from it.
